Rakshabandhan by Green Club

Green Club plays an important role in creating awareness among students about environmental activities like keeping surroundings clean, to make a habit of minimum waste generation and to reuse things and recycle them. Our college also runs a green club under which students organized Green Raksha Bandhan and made eco-friendly Rakhis from recycled paper. Students tied Rakhis to Principal, faculty members and also to the trees on campus and took pledge to protect them. The Beautiful and joyous occasion spread a message of environmental awareness. Students made varieties of Rakhis by using rice, pulses, flowers, dry fruits, pumpkin seeds, recycled material, beads, buttons, old fabric for making strips and braids, biodegradable materials like jute, cotton, silk and nature inspired Rakhis by using small seashells, clay, and seed Rakhis which can be implanted after the festival is over and a new plant can grow.

Our college organized seminar on "Awareness of Marine Pollution" speakers were invited to share their opinions and views and their experience of their real lives. Concepts like What causes marine pollution, how to tackle it, what are the preventive measures regarding it, were discussed in this seminar. About 71% of the Earth's surface is covered with water, and the oceans hold about 96.5% of all Earth's water and only 3.5% of fresh water is available for human consumption. Marine pollution means discharging of waste water or harmful chemicals into water bodies which make them polluted and harm aquatic plants and organisms. Major sources of marine pollution are plastic waste, oil spills, chemical contamination and deep ocean mining. This pollution causes harm to marine life, depletion of oxygen level in ocean and a threat to human health. The problem is major and cannot be solved immediately but small changes in regular life by us can solve this problem. We can reduce use of chemical fertilizer, start using reusable things and try to reduce waste, proper disposal of waste. The seminar ended by expressing sincere gratitude to guest speakers for their presence.
